Fourteenth—North Carolina, North Dakota, South Dakota, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Wyoming.

A magnificent pageant.
The parade was a magnificent pageant. Not the slightest hitch occurred anywhere. The fourteen divisions formed promptly into line on "fourth street" and marched in good order throughout. The grand encampment officers were driven from their headquarters at the Brown Palace hotel to the official review stand at the corner of 14th and 16th streets, accompanied by their escort, St. John's commandery No. 1 of Philadelphia and the famous cowboy band of Pueblo and Teller, who were reached a few minutes after 10 o'clock.

The great parade, headed by the Colorado commandery, introduced the grand encampment review stand at 10:30. There were many good looking commanderies in line that it would be impossible to mention all, but every one of the grand encampment officers for the magnificent appearance they made.

The scenes on the street during the parade were of interest and animation. Every other person wore some sort of badge or decoration, and, of course, Knights Templar badges predominated. For the sisters, cousins, aunts and other relatives of the knights, and in large numbers. The decorations showed up finely and attracted much attention. It was a glorious scene and one never witnessed before in Denver.

Seen on the Street.
There were nearly 300,000 people scattered along the line of march. The score of grand bands, public and private, were packed, and every individual along the route was crowded as well as the roof, porches and lawns. The courthouse and the post office building and other public structures were a sea of faces. It was good to see the people so ready to cheer everything and everybody. The lemonade stands and peddlers of sandwiches and other food and drinks thrived, and many of the grand encampment officers will become wealthy with today's business.

Wires were stretched from telegraph pole to pole and from street to street. The various commanderies were cheered as they passed along and expressions of delight were heard every where. The grand encampment officers were driven from their headquarters at the Brown Palace hotel to the official review stand at the corner of 14th and 16th streets, accompanied by their escort, St. John's commandery No. 1 of Philadelphia and the famous cowboy band of Pueblo and Teller, who were reached a few minutes after 10 o'clock.

The grand encampment went into session immediately after the parade, but little business was transacted. Grand Encampment Welcomed.

Business of the Session.
The election of officers for the ensuing three years will take place on Thursday, and it is pretty well settled that the grand master will be elected by the present grand master, Mr. C. H. Carr. A great deal of the time of the grand encampment will be spent in considering the new ritual, upon which a special committee has been working for a year past. There will probably be some considerable time spent in settling the constitution of the twenty-third triennial convocation, as two or three states are competing for the honor. The night will likely narrow down to Boston and the state of Connecticut before it is taken up for consideration, although the grand encampment is in the field at Louisville and Minneapolis, in addition to Cincinnati and Boston.

This evening a round of social calls was carried on between the various headquarters of the different state commanderies. All the rooms were gaily decorated with silken banners and trappings of the particular state commandery, and the hospitality extended to all comers in the matter of refreshments.

After the preliminary order of the grand encampment in regard to a competitive drill, it is hardly likely that this program will be carried out as originally arranged, but the exhibition drill will be given in the afternoon by the grand encampment, which takes place in the exhibition drill.
